

President's Message

Dear Colleagues,

The year is starting out with educational opportunities for you to increase your effectiveness as an appraiser. Our museums series Behind the Scenes kicked off on January 19th with a curator- led tour of the Museum of Latin American Art in Long Beach. We were joined by real property and business valuation discipline members. The works of Debora Arango and Lola Alvarez Bravo took on a deeper meaning for me as our museum host explained the context of their life and work.

During lunch afterwards, discussions focused on a variety of subjects, not all regarding the tour. One of the subjects discussed was use of the social media to augment our chapter's visibility in the community and to facilitate communication amongst chapter members, especially those who are frequent users of sites such as Facebook. We will be forming a committee to work on this project. If you are interested, please contact me.

On January 30th, we held our annual Economic Forecast with Professor Lee Ohanian from UCLA. Orell Anderson, MAI will be speaking on Real Estate Damage Valuation at Taix French Restaurant after our February 20th General Membership Meeting.

Our next museum outing is a private tour of the Frederick R. Weisman Art Foundation in Beverly Hills on February 22nd. We are keeping these events low cost when possible, to encourage people in different disciplines to attend.

Wishing you a prosperous New Year.

Best, Paul Drooks, ASA

WHAT YOU MISSED

The 2013 Economic Forecast held on January 30, 2013 at McCormick & Schmick's in downtown Los Angeles, featured Lee E. Ohanian PH.D, Professor of Economics, and Director of the Ettinger Family Program in Macroeconomic Research at UCLA. He is considered one of the world's leading experts on economic crises, economic policy and business cycles. On Wednesday evening, Dr. Ohanian spoke to ASA members and their guests on the state of the economy both on a National and International level and included charts and graphs to illustrate (see Chapter's website for Dr Ohanian's PowerPoint slides www.appraisersla.com). Some of the highlights of Dr. Ohanian's Wednesday night presentation that I captured from the event follow below:

- From 1980, there was a 30-year period of economic stability. Growth was 2.0% per year per person. Now, we are performing below potential with growth around 1.2% per year per person. However, for the outlook for 2013, growth is closer to 2.0%.
- Panic of 2008 created a "wait-&-see economy". As a result, the government adopted many expensive policies (stimulus, cash for clunkers, homebuyer's tax credit). However, that has had no affect on unemployment, which has doubled its 5-6% rate of about 5 years ago. People became uncertain as these programs failed to bring back prosperity. About 60 million jobs have been lost.
- Debt doubled in the last three years. Government programs drove up debt and highlighted long-run fiscal imbalances. The long-term debt outlook is negative.
- The housing recovery is no longer a drag on the economy. Low lending rates and prices remain attractive, relative to a peak. However, lending constraints such as Dodd-Frank have hindered bank lending; an example of how a highly polarized congress cannot make policy and focuses on redistributing income and raising taxes on most productive earners.
- Two factors play a role in depressed GDP: Employment and worker's productivity. Employment remains depressed. Consumer spending is low. In June 2009 the recession was determined over. However, we lost jobs. This is the first time this has happened. On the upside, productivity has been higher than it has ever been before.
- Monetary Policy - $1.7 trillion in banks. When this enters into economy, inflation will rise. Money supply has grown since 30% and has a correlation with inflation.

- The international state is no better. Europe and Japan's population will shrink and the U.S. will grow. Emerging countries such as Brazil, China and India will lead.
- Conclusions: Economic stagnation is likely to continue and world growth will be driven by emerging countries (India, Brazil and China). Weaknesses and uncertainty will likely keep U.S. real interest rates low, if policy is uncertain and dysfunctional, then recovery could be very strong. The outlook depends critically on what happens in Washington D.C.

On January 19th, the Los Angeles chapter was treated to a private tour of two exhibitions at the Museum of Latin American Art in Long Beach. Led by head curator Idurre Alonso, members viewed the exhibitions Sociales: Debora Arango Llega Hoy and Lola Alvarez Bravo: The Photography of an Era.

Debora Arango is one of Columbia's most important modern artists, and this exhibition was her first museum show in the United States. Arango (1907-2005) stirred controversy in the 1930s with her powerful and realistic nude portraits. In her paintings and watercolors, she later focused on the social issues of the time, such as violence and injustice, poverty, prostitution and women's issues. Because of the criticisms and critiques of her work, created during the conservative and Catholic culture of the 1930s and 1940s, she withdrew from the art world, all the while continuing to create art in the privacy of her own studio. The exhibition highlighted important works from all stages of her career, and were culled from the Museo de Arte Moderno de Medellin in Columbia, where they were donated to the museum by the artist before she died.

Lola Alvarez Bravo (1903-1993) is considered one of the most important artists of 20th century Mexican photography, although she is often overshadowed by her former husband, Manuel Alvarez Bravo. The exhibition highlights a long-lost archive of her work that was found in a Mexico City apartment, where it had been sitting for over 20 years. Included in the archive were Lola's unpublished negatives, archival material and vintage prints; also included were photographs by Manuel Alvarez Bravo, and Lola's former students.

LA chapter members, colleagues and friends gather for a private tour at the Museum of Latin American Art in Long Beach.

After the tour, members had the opportunity to finish viewing the museum and its permanent collection. Others gathered at the museum's Viva Café, where they discussed the exhibition and caught up on appraisal news, while enjoying empanadas and Latin American cuisine.
